Grief in the Digital Age

It’s a brave new world. And technology is perhaps the biggest change that has influenced our society at all levels over the last 10-15 years. Technology influences everything we do now, from the minute (ordering food) to the significant (how we communicate). We won’t fully realize the implications of technology for years to come.

Naturally we see the impact of technology among children and adolescents in significant ways. In particular, kids as young as 8 or 9 have phones and by their teenage years, a phone becomes a main means of communication, replacing talking with texting or Instagramming, even finding teens texting one another in the same room!

So how does this impact grief and loss in this population? In their article “Grieving Adolescents: The Paradox of Using Technology for Support”, James, Oltjenbruns, and Whiting point out a couple of key ideas.

• There is much work and research yet to be done on this topic. But we can’t ignore it. It’s here to stay.
• There are numerous pros and cons for online bereavement support. (see reverse)
• Technology can impact an adolescent’s development negatively.
• Technology is compatible with teens’ need to establish autonomy and privacy as well as their more sophisticated thinking and thirst for knowledge.

We have all seen how technology impacts our work; online communication is often the first place where information about a death is communicated. As the adults in their lives, we need to stay informed about the technology that is ever evolving and impacting students in all parts of their lives. Their devices are life lines for them and technology will likely influence the way they experience grief and loss. Our difficult but crucial task is to learn alongside them and guide them through these strange, new waters.
WE OFFER A VARIETY OF CAMPS to meet the grieving needs of children and adolescents. Camps provide the opportunity to be with others who are also grieving the death of a loved one. Camps are expressive in nature and led by experienced facilitators in art, music, play and nature activities. School Resources

AS A COMMUNITY PARTNER, Western Reserve Grief Services offers schools, faculty and staff members resources to navigate the painful experience of grief and loss.

Grief Support in Schools
For students and staff before or after the death of a student, staff or community member. This may include administrative consultation, staff support and facilitation of 8-10 week support groups (S.T.A.R.S.) for students in grades 1-12. These groups can be tailored to specific school needs.

Classroom Presentations
Interactive classroom presentations, often integrated into a health class curriculum, can be provided to all grade levels with age-appropriate information focusing on natural life spans of all living things, end of life, anticipating a death, common grief reactions, coping, traumatic death and supporting a grieving friend.

Crisis Response
Immediate on-site crisis response is available when a school-related death occurs. All staff are trained and prepared to respond. This service is available to the general school community and provides licensed grief counselors to support school administration, staff, parents and students. This includes strategic planning, large and small group interventions, education and follow-up support.

Staff Training
Professional development opportunities can be tailored to a school's specific needs. Topics include an overview of grief and loss, anticipatory grief, children and teen grief, traumatic grief, supporting students through loss, grief activities for the classroom and school crisis response.

To set up a S.T.A.R.S. group, classroom presentation, staff training or to access crisis response, please contact Jane Arnoff Logsdon, School Liaison at jarnoff-logston@hospicewr.org or 216.486.6287.
